NEWS

Rutgers Set to Kick Out Students Today Unless They Comply With COVID Vaccine Mandate

As of today, Rutgers reminds one of fewer than one universities out of 1,215 four-year colleges and universities that refuse to let go of COVID-19 vaccine mandates and according to anonymous sources, Rutgers is planning to diverted non-compliant students beginning today.

By Brownstone Institute

Miss a day, miss a lot. Subscribe to The Defender's Top News of the Day. It's free.

By Lucia Sinatra

Editor's note: Children's Health Defense in August 2021 sued Rutgers University, claiming its COVID-19 vaccine mandate violates the right to informed consent and the right to obtain exemptions based on religion. The case, still pending, is likely headed to the U.S. Supreme Court.

On March 25, 2021, Rutgers University became the first university in the nation to announce it would require students to take COVID-19 vaccines for fall 2021 enrollment, releasing its plan June 8, 2021 announcement that "with our source of human liberties and our history of protecting that, the vaccine is not.

What happened within a few short months that made Rutgers ultimately decide to feel with science had liberties?

Rutgers claimed and still does to this day that it has a "commitment to health and safety for all members of its community" even though on July 30, 2021, Michelle Rotenberg issued a press release claiming that COVID-19 vaccines do not prevent infection or transmission.

As if that press release is some figment of our imagination, in January 2022, Rutgers announced a booster mandate with a compliance date set for Jan. 31, leaving students with less than 30 days to comply.

As of today, Rutgers remains one of fewer than 100 universities out of 2,679 four-year colleges and universities that refuse to let go of COVID-19 vaccine mandates and according to anonymous sources, Rutgers is planning to diverted non-compliant students beginning today.

Perhaps this dogmatic adherence to COVID-19 vaccine mandates has been a long time coming. In 2020 and 2021, Rutgers had some of the strictest COVID-19 vaccine mandates, and the university's COVID-19 vaccine were finding ways to resume to normalcy.

Students quickly fell in line and anyone who questioned the lockdown or mask mandates was denounced as an anti-science "COVID-19 conspiracy theorist" and ignorant and a grandma after.

BFK Jr./Hooker NEW book: Vax-Unvax, Order Now!

A former Rutgers student described her experience as being stuck in a maelstrom of fear, divisive partisanship and social pressure leading her to self-censor rather than perpetuate misinformation or appear to be banned from community.

When the vaccine distribution began in early 2021, pandemic fears quickly morphed into anger against anyone who dared to question the vaccine's necessity, safety and long-term effects. Dozens of classroom conversations were fueled by vaccine talk.

Support for the mandates was seen as virtuous and altruistic, and anyone who had questions quickly learned to keep their mouths shut or else meet with the wrong end of the cancel culture sword. Despite the question that if it was OK for the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention to announce that the vaccines were not preventing infection or transmission, the media and mainstream media was reporting on it, why wasn't Rutgers supporting its students so they could feel safe to talk about it?

Meanwhile, Rutgers insisted to its community members that nobody was forced to get vaccinated and that they could request an exemption. What they were not advertising was that exemptions were hard to come by. Religious exemptions were rarely decided.

Medical exemptions often took months and multiple appeals to be approved, if ever.

While the University did give a 90-day extension on booster compliance based on a recent COVID-19 infection, this extension could only be requested once, and any medical exemption requests based on positive antibody tests from prior COVID-19 infections were denied.

One former Rutgers student described his experience requesting a booster exemption after developing significant cardiac issues.

He was told explicitly that antibody tests made no difference. His medical exemption request written by his cardiologist was eventually approved after multiple rounds of back-and-forth.

Apparently, the Rutgers Immunization Group, an opaque group of people in charge of handling exemptions, determined this young man's cardiac issues were not a good enough reason to exempt him from a booster, even though emerging data showing COVID-19 vaccines could cause cardiac side effects, especially in young males.

Faculty and staff members at Rutgers arguably had it worse than students as federal Executive Order 14042, signed on Sept. 9, 2021, meant that employees of federally contracted entities, including research universities such as Rutgers, be vaccinated against COVID-19.

On Jan. 4, 2022, Rutgers announced a booster mandate for all communities members including employees, even though a booster requirement was not part of the federal mandate.

Some employees — all of whom completed primary vaccinations, and most were COVID-19 recovered — reported that they received threatening notices to comply with the booster mandate stating that "if you fail to comply with the policy, you will be subject to disciplinary actions, you will be subject to discipline, up to and including termination of employment, but namely termination."

Order Now 'The Wuhan Cover-up' by RFK Jr.!

While the Executive Order provided exemptions for medical or religious reasons, they were also very difficult to attain. As a result, many employees reluctantly complied, and some were forced to resign.

The oppressiveness of the employee vaccine mandate also kept many prospective employees from accepting career-changing job offers at Rutgers, despite the administration lamenting about the ongoing labor shortage at the university.

On May 12, President Joe Biden signed an executive order revoking 14042 thereby eliminating Rutgers' reason for implementing an employee COVID-19 vaccine mandate.

Four days later, Rutgers dropped the booster mandate, yet the employee COVID-19 vaccine mandate remains.

Now, in August, months after the federal government announced the end of the public health emergency, Rutgers is one of a small minority of universities steadfastly holding onto COVID-19 vaccine mandates.

The pandemic is nowhere near over at Rutgers, not by a long shot.

Originally published by Brownstone Institute.

Lucia Sinatra is a recovering corporate securities attorney. After becoming a mother, Lucia turned her attention to fighting injustices in public schools in California for students with learning disabilities. She co-founded NoSchoolMandates.com to help fight college vaccine mandates.

Subscribe To The Defender - It's Free!

First Name | Last Name | Email | SIGN UP

SUGGEST A CORRECTION

Brownstone Institute

The Brownstone Institute is a nonprofit organization founded May 2021. Its vision is of a society that places the highest value on the voluntary interaction of individuals and groups in all areas of economic and social life and forms including that which is exercised by public or private authorities.

Sign up for free news and updates from Children's Health Defense. CHD focuses on legal strategies to defend the health of our children and obtain justice for those injured. We can't do it without your support.

Republishing Guidelines

Children's Health Defense Comment Policy

We welcome relevant and respectful comments. Off-topic comments may be removed.

Please read our Comment Policy before commenting.

Get It

21 Comments Login

Join the discussion...

LOG IN WITH OR SIGN UP WITH DISQUS

Name

Share Newest Oldest

Jessica
a day ago

This is all part of the deliberate dumbing down of society and social engineering. It were a student a Rutgers, its main subjects will be Critical Race Theory and Critical Gender Theory. There will be no room for critical thinking, no room for debate, no room for the scientific method. Only the spewed word out of brainless of starters for and with most of your time and $$. Better yet, don't bother being indoctrinated at these private indoctrination universities. Rutgers are pushing this nonsense because they are being compensated to do so by the government and by the tyranny complacency going. Without your consent. They received threatening notices to comply. Please check out the video that I shared on Rumble, please discuss the content with your friends and family. Please do not let this be the new normal. It is not, but the lobby of the monsters in the conformists, and the wise so the fools. https://rumble.com/vtkpvqp...

Reply Share

tag
a day ago

I learned a trade while still in high school. I started working in that field the day after graduation. I'm still working in that field today. I've been able to afford to buy my own businesses, several of them since, one for 25 years in manufacturing. I did do what if you go to an expensive college, come out in a large debtor and can't get a job in the field you wanted 4-5 years on? You call that success? I call that stupid.

Reply Share

Judith Joel
a day ago

AMEN, well said !! I concur !!!

Reply Share

Carol Summers
a day ago

"Get Out Of That College"!
"The Life You Save Is Your Own"

Tyler Warner says it people from his vaccine injury support group have 'committed suicide' in the past month. Nobody will listen to them!

Georgia has rejected the Rockefeller Texas has rejected the Rockefeller 1913 lawsuit.
"There was an 'organized criminal conspiracy' to 'coerce people' to take the Jab, Shot."

Reply Share

Judith Joel
a day ago

Thank you Carol !!

Reply Share

Rob Gill
a day ago

Honestly... getting tired of this situation. Rutgers isn't the only college in the world, Budweiser isn't the only beer in the world, Chase isn't the only bank in the world. Decide what's important to you, stop whining and support what you believe in.

Reply Share

tag
a day ago

Exactly!

Reply Share

Judith Joel
a day ago

Well said Rob

Reply Share

BiDeebee
a day ago

It's too bad there are not more "awake" people who will pull their kids from this school in "boycott" so to speak. There are plenty of other places to get an education, and not supporting this kind of BS is the only way to command school.

Reply Share

tag
a day ago

Exactly! Hey parents, would you rather have the stating of having your child in a "woke" university or would you rather have a dead child? Not a fan of college also indoctrinated so called education in the first place. Small community college or trade school for the win. Also, I'm not a fan of the word "woke" because I don't want to the field that degree is from and most go away seeing more money than they can make. Stupid!

Reply Share

Judith Joel
a day ago

It's the privilege the parents are seeing as well as the students. I hope they wake up before it's too late.

Reply Share

Toni Tanner
a day ago

It seems that no one is thinking. Donald Trump pinned Fauci to the bowl of Covid-19 program? Biden pinned him because we did not know enough about the pandemic to follow any protocol protection? Now, we know so much more, these billionaire propaganda machines are pushing the vaccine/booster mandates? Why? Why are they pushing it so hard? Who benefits from vaccines not having released events? If there was not hard and no long term, not if there are side effects or problems? We must fight against this or we will be left to be slaves to the elite. Wake up! Refuse to control the world!

Reply Share

Judith Joel
a day ago

Fauci was already in and Trump didn't get rid of him when he could have. He didn't pick Fauci.

Reply Share

tag
a day ago

The game is sure to us death to take of the vaccines and new meds and become patients for life. Lots of money for them to make and lots of dying of the complications. No better time in history than to "Just say NO!" (And take your VPS and gtfo)

Reply Share

Steve Nash
a day ago

The kids stupid parents (and the stupid kids) will one day regret their ignorance. Rutgers has a $3 billion dollar endowment. I look forward to the day that Rutgers endowment is worthless because of the lawsuits that will be filed by the students who were harmed by their stupid and mandates. Maybe this is the way we get rid of all these Neoliberal Ivy League colleges.

Reply Share

tag
a day ago

My dad was in Rutgers school pre WWII. During a test student sat around talking and not paying attention. The professor told them to shut up and pay attention or no other bigotes. My dad said he attended Northwestern (except it wasn't) Ted Northwestern, it was a small community college in Lima Ohio by the same name) I'm not sure what the point is but I'm not a fan of the expensive Ivy League education over real smarts and common sense thinking!

Reply Share

dmorgan1955
a day ago

Wonder about the kick-back Rutgers gets from big pharma?

Reply Share

tag
a day ago

Good point.

Reply Share

Judith Joel
a day ago

Tom
a day ago

Stanes will eventually film out such idiot administrators.

Reply Share

unacceptable slave
17 hours ago

Rutgers is not interested in filling its enrollment, there is nothing we can say or do to change their mind. They are choosing not to own it. If someone still wants to go to this awful indoctrination center, that is their choice. If they want a BS, 100k, 29K job of green money, have at it! I just do not see what the Crowd does anymore. They've made their choice.

Reply Share

MCarp2
a day ago

My advice is to leave this wacky, psychotic learning institution. What they are in effect teaching is that you have no rights to what is put into your body. Forced vaccination is against every medical ethics which should NOT be waived or suspended because of COVID-19 and/or vaccine mandates.

Reply Share

steve
a day ago

I hope that the "best and brightest" get a true-that demonic people want to flunk them.

Reply Share

Dennis
a day ago

Hey Rutgers, When enrollment drops to near zero, what are you going to do? ...Mandate that students attend your university? Maybe you could get some local politicians to make attendance a law.

Reply Share

Joshua
7 hours ago

I think all those affected should seek a class action suit, against Rutgers. By now, there is so much evidence of the vaccine failure and possible adverse effects, I can't imagine them not having success. Set precedent, the result would be profound.

Reply Share

G Orlando
10 hours ago

a college must promote knowledge and the technical and scientific possibilities to its students. Rutgers is not doing that. Rutgers is a political organization that supports the regimes that directly or indirectly attack it. all adults have their personal beliefs. those must be treated with respect. I'm sorry to say it but the word compulsory is not allowed to be used in a democratic environment. Rutgers is not a democratic institution. I'm sorry for every student you would choose the other path for the future education.

Reply Share

tag
10 hours ago

At 16,322 per the lawsuits against Rutgers begin. Since when is it legal to insist someone take a bio weapon that is known to cause injury and deaths a mandate? Hey young people. Don't go to Rutgers. Don't go to any college that does this. Go to a trade school. Learn a trade that knows and bragging. It's this generation we need to thank for the world of the insane madness. Please, now in the occasion and tell this University to go pound sand.

Reply Share

Subscribe Privacy Do Not Sell My Data

DONATE

Donate Now

You make the difference.

Latest News

Dr. Pierre Kory: 'Ivermectin Is the Vitamin D of Early Treatment'

Ivermectin Gone Wrong — Is the Evidence of Ivermectin Safety Risky?

'A Fauci Clone,' Ivermectin Director Oversaw Gain-of-Function Ban Flew to Biosafety Lab Research

MORE NEWS

Latest Views

What's Behind the Push to Vaccinate Pet Mice Allergic to COVID Vaccines? Something Else?

Review Adds to Evidence That Ivermectin Considerably Cuts Deaths

How Small Doctors Are Standing Up to Dangers of mRNA Vaccines

MORE VIEWS

Get FREE News & Updates!

Sign up for breaking news from The Defender.

Currently only eligible for numbers in the United States.

Phone

Important: Phone number must be in the following format: +12345678910 or 123-456-7890

CONTINUE

Get Text Alerts

Sign up for breaking news from The Defender.

Currently only eligible for numbers in the United States.

Phone

Important: Phone number must be in the following format: +12345678910 or 123-456-7890

CONTINUE

We use cookies to ensure that we give you the best experience on our website. You consent to our cookies if you continue to use our website. Privacy Policy